Fred Traxel is having two large tobacco barns erected. The work is being done by John Layton. They have an incline railway erected to haul the timbers to the site for the barns.

KENTUCKY AT THE FAIR.

Some Things She Should Have and Some She Will Not Get.

Courier-Journal.—Kentucky is not used to being crowded, and it will require a very decided contraction to squeeze its 5,000 feet of expectation into 1,200 feet of allotted space for her mines and forestry exhibits at Chicago. Yet that is what Colonel M. H. Crump says we will have to do, and we seem to care it to his vigilance that we are not to be crowded into 800 feet of space. But perhaps if we get a fourth of all we expect out of the Chicago show, we will be doing very well with our $100,000. Mines and timber are what we are counting on for our future. If we have any room to spare in our exhibit, these two undeveloped sources of magnificent wealth should have it.

The Kentucky books and the Kentucky pictures, and statuary, and ferns, and needlework, and premium fruit and vegetables are all entitled to their fair share, but our strong card is our mineral and timber resources. In that particular line we have no more reason to fear competition with all the world than we have in our horses, and the world is more deficient in knowledge of our minerals and our timber than of our horses. In books, art and education we have little to be proud of when we place our exhibit alongside other exhibits that will be displayed at Chicago. It will be valuable as a correct indication of the little or much that we may have done. It may be observed by those curious to see what Kentucky has accomplished, but it will not be sought out by those seeking new ideas and valuable instruction in that line.

There must, of course, be an exhibit of Kentucky life at Chicago—of the old Kentucky home and of pioneer relics, and some graphic and convincing show of the characteristic social atmosphere of the state. Our pampered state pride, fed so long upon a confirmed habit of mental regarding ourselves in a mirror and admiring the reflection, demands such concession. But Kentucky is not spending $100,000 at Chicago merely to gratify state pride or to make a foolish show in lines of accomplishment where we will be sadly and hopelessly outdone, but in order also, and chiefly, to advertise in an effective business way those features of the state's progress and present condition and future possibilities that we will attract immigration and capital. It is a business enterprise. We want to show up the solid claims of the state to consideration. If we put on exhibition at Chicago our conspicuous and somewhat exaggerated state pride, we want to rescue it from ridicule by backing it up with something substantial, so that our state may not parade as a vain glorious do-nothing.

Things will be taken at their actual value at Chicago. The little glamour of state love through which we kindly regard ourselves will be stripped away, and we will be put in the scales and weighed and tested by inflexible standards for what we have and what we have done. The social, easy-going, breezy, life-loving, virile, warm-hearted Kentuckian is known and liked pretty much everywhere. At Chicago it will be an interesting novelty to give a picture of the less widely known Kentuckian in the act of attending to business. There are some unfortunates in the world who are skeptical as to his existence.
